A random blood glucose test (RBG) assumes the patient has recently had a meal so ranges are higher. It can still be useful in detecting high glucose levels in patients. Random testing is useful because glucose levels in healthy people do not vary widely.